P. Janowiak; L-M. Chauvet) or the testamentary aspect of Eucharist (cf. D. Power) or the ethical and social dimension of Eucharist (cf M. J. Koddekanal), or new Catholic approaches on eucharistic sacrifice (cf. R. Daly). The Eucharist is larger than the eucharistic prayer, and the real presence in the Eucharist cannot be studied apart from the real presence of Christ elsewhere in the Church, as the Vatican II decree on the liturgy and Paul VI's Mysterium Fidei have indicated. Even with these limitations, this is clearly a book that offers scholars a treasure house of material on both the history and the theology of the Eucharist and is posthumously a tribute to the author. Sincere thanks must also be given to Daly for his excellent and painstaking work of editing.
